The Irish Fleabane, also known as the Willow-leaved Inula, is unique within Britain and Ireland to the northern fringes of Lough Derg. It was at one time common in these parts but a combination of factors, such as habitat loss, has brought it to the brink of extinction. There are now only a handful of plants surviving in the wild. A local community project has been initiated to try to re-establish this species. If you are interested in this project please visit our website:
